Lessons learned

“The delay in development does not kill “

One of the major constraints in the country to know the real situation of children around their development, it has not made a baseline, possibly because measurement instruments-Scale Development-are not appropriate nor are contextualized.

“What we see is not what most worrying”

Local governments invested in construction and asphalt, parks, avenues and bridges, because "that" meets their political commitments and is demonstrably in the short term.

Conclusions

- Make advocacy for child development is difficult but not impossible, the only way to achieve this is showing results and arguing that the strength of change is in the same communities.
